What are the best and worst states for 8(a) set-aside federal contracts?

Count yourself lucky if you are an 8(a) Business Development Program participant based in Virginia or Maryland.

There are $2.5 billion worth of 8(a) set-aside federal contracts previously awarded to 8(a) firms in Virginia that are expiring in 2016 and beyond and are likely to be recompeted.

For Maryland-based firms, there are $1.6 billion in such 8(a) pending recompetes.

Under federal rules, 8(a) set-asides generally must be recompeted as 8(a) set-asides once they expire. That means opportunities for additional 8(a) firms.

But you would be hard-pressed to find recompete opportunities for 8(a) set-asides in New Hampshire, Rhode Island or Vermont. There are no current 8(a) set-aside contracts awarded to vendors in those states, Set-Aside Alert found.

New small biz provisions in effect

The recent federal court case involving a defense contractor that agreed to pay a $20 million fine for posing as a Woman-Owned-Small Business (WOSB) is likely to bring more scrutiny to other WOSBs in federal contracting in the coming months, owners and advocates say.

The Office of the U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York recently settled a civil fraud lawsuit it had brought against UFC Aerospace LLC of Holtsville, NY, and its former president, Douglas Davis. The lawsuit charged them with violating the False Claims Act by fraudulently representing the company as a WOSB at various times from 2001 to 2011 in order to secure millions of dollars in federal subcontracts.

In the settlement, UFC agreed to pay the government $20 million and to admit that it never qualified.
as a WOSB. “At no point did UFC meet the statutory requirements for claiming WOSB status,” the Justice Department’s said in a news release (http://goo.gl/yOgs5O).

Because of that case, and because several other reports also have shown potential fraud in the WOSB program, some women owners and advocates anticipate a heightened level of oversight for the WOSB program this year.

In May 2015, the Small Business Administration’s Inspector General identified WOSB set-asides awards totaling $7.1 million that may have been improper. In October 2014, the Government Accountability Office reported that 40% of WOSBs examined did not meet eligibility at the time of examination.

Set-Aside Alert, in an independent investigation in 2015, identified $69 million worth of WOSB set-asides that appeared to have been awarded improperly.

The cumulative effect of the reports is that WOSBs will face “growing scrutiny under the FCA,” according to Bradley Wine and Sandeep Nandivada of Morrison & Foerster LLP.

The attorneys urge small business owners to be vigilant in what they and others communicate about their status. “Small businesses should understand that a company can violate the FCA even if it does not have actual knowledge that a certification submitted to the federal government is false,” they wrote in a recent white paper (http://goo.gl/GISRZp).

Meanwhile, a woman business owner is taking matters into her own hands. Judy LaSpada, chief executive of Virtuoso Sourcing Group LLC of Glendale, CO, issued a press release on Jan. 12 saying she would provide primes with access to company documents to validate her firm’s WOSB status.

“The offer is in response to the proliferation of firms recently asserting WOSB status,” the press release (http://goo.gl/Z0ufYU) said.

Set-Aside Alert has compiled a list of the best and worst states for 8(a) set-asides as part of its recent research into the 8(a) program.

The 8(a) program is the flagship effort of the Small Business Administration for assisting small disadvantaged firms. It offers free training, mentors and set-aside preferences in federal contracting.

We downloaded data from the Federal Procurement Data System to compile a data set of $7.4 billion in 8(a) set-aside-only awards expiring in calendar 2016 and beyond. The data was sorted and ranked by vendor state.

We found wide disparities in the amount of awards to 8(a) firms by state. Of course, some vendors may provide service beyond their home state as well.

Proximity to federal offices likely was a factor in putting Virginia and Maryland in the lead. The District of Columbia also was in the Top 10 with $171 million in 8(a) set-asides expiring in 2016 and beyond.

Ranking in the Top 10 for 8(a) set-asides were Virginia, $2.5 billion; Maryland, $1.6 billion; Ohio, $537 million; Alaska, $438 million; Colorado, $245 million; Florida, $201 million; California, $191 million; Texas, $187 million; DC, $171 million; and Georgia, $153 million.

The bottom-ranked states were New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont, all zero; Iowa, $29,000; Arkansas, $35,000; Maine, $335,000; Connecticut, $584,000; and Minnesota, $777,000.

Column: Tips for Teaming
by Tom Johnson, publisher, Set-Aside Alert

There are many reasons for teaming up with other companies to pursue federal contracts. Perhaps you cannot meet all the requirements by yourself. Perhaps your current strategy is to seek subcontracts and gain valuable past performance. Perhaps your industry regularly uses subcontractors and suppliers. In any case, putting together the best team isn’t easy.

Here are a few tips:

1. Federal Business Opportunities website

Use the Interested Parties lists at FBO.gov to find live situations where prime contractors are looking for subcontractors, and vice versa.

To access the Interested Parties lists at FBO.gov, you must register a username and password and log in. Once you log in, the Interested Parties tab will be live and you can see which contractors have registered their interest in that specific project. You also can register your own interest in the work. Primes and subs then may contact you to evaluate your capabilities and compatibility.

This is a useful tool for a specific opportunity, but it also is a means for identifying connections long before a specific contract is posted. For example, when a Request for Information or Sources Sought notice is issued on FBO.gov, sometimes months in advance of a solicitation, interested parties begin registering on the site.

Checking the list regularly will enable you to be first in line in responding to those interests with your capabilities statement. Then follow up with your outreach to the company executive responsible for putting the team in place.

2. Dynamic Small Business Search

Once you have identified possible teaming partners, either on FBO.gov or otherwise, use the Small Business Administration’s Dynamic Small Business Search (DSBS) to evaluate those firms.

The DSBS is a database of small businesses that want to do business with the federal government. It is supplemental to the government’s contractor registry at SAM.gov, and provides a significant amount of additional information about specific companies.

Use the tool at dsbs.sba.gov. DSBS is searchable by company name, NAICS and PSC codes, socioeconomic status, geographic location and keyword. For example, you can search for a “cybersecurity” partner in Maryland and get a list of small businesses having those skills. Companies that have made the effort to enhance their listings with keywords, certifications and other data are more likely to be stronger teaming partners.

DSBS also is a good way to evaluate those companies you read about in Set-Aside Alert. When a company catches your eye because it’s winning contracts from your target agency, or has a socioeconomic status that complements your business, look them up in DSBS. You may find additional information that increases your confidence level in developing that relationship.

3. USA Spending.gov

You also can research companies on USA Spending.gov to see if those firms already have won government contracts. If so, the companies have past performance and also are experienced with government bidding. These are two of the most important qualities for a future team member.

4. Set-Aside Alert

Every issue of Set-Aside Alert contains information to link you to primes and subs.

Our Teaming Opportunities column is the most obvious, where we identify prime contractors looking for small firms or small disadvantaged firms to bid on specific jobs. Even if that specific job is not of interest, consider reaching out to that prime to see if there are other needs that you can support.

The Defense Department Small Business Awards and Small Business Awards pages identify companies that have won contracts. Are they servicing agencies you would like to serve? Are they subcontracting? We provide contact information to enable you to reach out.

Use the awardees’ lists for a long-term strategy. Awardees may have their team in place but also may be looking for additional partners as they grow and win more work. Develop long-term relationships, rather than focusing on last-minute attempts to get on a team.

Also, scan through our lists of recently-certified HUBZone and 8(a) firms, which all have been certified for federal set-asides. Work with them to supplement their resources, while their socioeconomic status provides the winning edge.

In addition, our new service, Small Business Subcontracting Opportunities, provides a daily email of subcontracting opportunities, including state, local and federal opportunities. Learn more about the service at SBSSubOpps.com.

5. Networking

The tried and true method of meeting potential partners has long focused on networking events. There are many organizations hosting events that help you meet and evaluate prospects for longer-term relationships. These events help you hone your elevator speech, and you go home with a pocketful of business cards and notes about the next steps.

But it takes a lot of time and commitment to attend these events, and there is a risk that the best connections for your work won’t be there. It’s a good idea to attend some of these events, but don’t overload or do a scattershot approach. Find a few good events that cater to your specific industry and use them judiciously.

New way to sell small amounts of code to gov’t

The General Services Administration’s 18F innovation agency has launched a new micro-purchasing online reverse auction platform to facilitate the buying and selling of small amounts of software code, the agency announced in a blog post. 18F plans to post batches of new tasks onto the micro-purchase platform in the coming weeks. Bidding starts at $3,500 and can go as low as $1, as vendors offer lower prices for providing the code.

Most of the code currently being sought is open source code for improvements to the GSA’s in-house Tock time-tracking open source software. More information: https://goo.gl/oPR5gn

GSA claims savings in wireless strategic sourcing

Federal agencies reaped 27% in savings on average with the Federal Strategic Sourcing Initiative’s wireless blanket purchase agreements in fiscal 2015, compared to fiscal 2014, Mary Davie, GSA assistant commissioner, wrote in a blog post.

Monthly recurring charges per device dropped to $38.82 per user per month, from $55.40 on average at the start of the program, over many common voice and data smartphone plans.

“The BPAs are saving government agencies more than $16 per month per user. This marks a new low for the average MRC and highest monthly savings rate to date,” Davie added.

Small biz contracting bill approved

small business federal contracting.

The bill’s goal is to “expand and improve opportunities for America’s small firms to compete for federal contracts.” Chabot wrote in a news release (http://goo.gl/OmgbQ3).

The bill has 17 sections addressing multiple topics.

It includes provisions to:

--Require, for the purpose of determining the percentage of small business procurement, the Small Business Administration to tabulate “total contracts” to include contracts performed overseas and also contracts that are mandated to go to not-small firms.

--Set up a pilot program to allow first tier subcontractors to request a past performance rating.

--Create uniformity in regulations for contracting with service-disabled veteran-owned small businesses (SDVOSBs). The committee in previous years has had hearings on the difficulties in having separate programs for SDVOSBs managed by the SBA and by the Veterans Affairs Department.

In addition, the bill included an amendment to allow firms to protest task orders over $10 million, according to a report by FedNewsRadio (http://goo.gl/gLRbQN).

Disaster zones to be HUBZones

HUBZone eligibility is to be expanded for areas hit by disaster or military base closures, according to language included in Section 866 of the national defense authorization law for fiscal 2016.

“Areas impacted by a base closure or qualified disaster will have expanded HUBZone eligibility for a minimum of 8 years. In addition, Native Hawaiian Organizations (NHOs) would qualify as HUBZone companies,” according to a statement distributed by the HUBZone Contractors National Council (https://goo.gl/Tk9BMD).

Closed military bases are to be considered HUBZones for eight years, up from five years, and areas that intersect or are contiguous to the base closure area also have expanded HUBZone eligibility for at least eight years, wrote Ryan Bradel and Jozel Przygrodzi, attorneys with Greenberg Traurig LLP, in a recent brief (http://goo.gl/OSkoNl).
