Defense Wants New Safeguards for Unclassified Data

A proposed rule would require many small defense contractors to beef up their cybersecurity protection.

According to the notice in the June 28 Federal Register, the Defense Department wants "a basic and an enhanced level of information protection" by all contractors that handle unclassified government information. Contractors would be required to report to the government on any intrusion into their computer systems.

The department estimates the average cost to a small business would be around 0.5% of revenues. It expects nearly 49,000 small contractors would be subject to the new requirements, about three-fourths of the small firms that do business with DOD.

In a comment during the rulemaking process, the Aerospace Industries Association raised concerns about the cost of compliance.

The requirements would apply to contractors that handle information that is:

- designated critical or critical program information;
- subject to export controls;
- exempt from public disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act;
- designated as For Official Use Only, Sensitive But Unclassified, Limited Distribution, Proprietary, Originator Controlled, Law Enforcement Sensitive;
- Certain technical data and computer software;
- technical information; or
- personally identifiable.

At a minimum, contractors must employ anti-virus, anti-spyware protection that is regularly updated and must comply with the security controls recommended by the National Institute of Standards, available in NIST publication SP 800-53, "Recommended Security Controls for Federal Information Systems and Organizations" (<http://csrc.nist.gov/publications/PubsSPs.html>).

"The objective of this rule is for DOD to avoid compromise of unclassified computer networks on which DOD information is resident on or transiting through contractor information systems, and to prevent the exfiltration of DOD information on such systems," the Defense Acquisition Regulation Council said.

The proposed rule is DFARS Case 2011-D039. Comments are due Aug. 29.

GSA: Cut Prices

GSA is pressing for lower prices on its 8(a) STARS II set-aside governmentwide acquisition contract.

In a June 21 email to prospective offerors, GSA said it was delaying awards on the multiple-award contract. "This discussion email serves as notice that GSA has made the decision to hold additional discussions, with an emphasis on pricing," the message said, according to Federal Computer Week.

The agency said it plans to make awards by July 31. STARS II is a five-year task order contract for IT with a ceiling of $10 billion. The original STARS contract was the

A Long Time Coming

A Georgia company has won the first contract set aside for woman-owned businesses, 3,841 days after the program was signed into law.

The VA Medical Center in Dublin, GA, awarded a $50,000 contract for courier service to Handling Your Bizzness Inc. of Sylvania, GA. The contract was awarded through a reverse auction.

After President Clinton signed the law in the final month of his administration, the Bush administration sat on the women's contracting program throughout its eight year-tenure while conducting several studies. The Obama administration implemented the law this year.

Contract Dollars Hit a Record, But Short of Goal

The federal government fell short of its 23% goal for small business contracting in 2010 for the fifth straight year, according to SBA.

Agencies awarded 22.7% of their prime contract dollars to small firms, up from 21.9% the year before. The government achieved the congressionally mandated goal in only one socioeconomic category, small disadvantaged businesses.

SBA said prime contract dollars flowing to small contractors reached a record $97.95 billion in a year when total federal contract spending declined slightly, according to the Office of Management and Budget. SBA has acknowledged in the past that the official figures may not be completely accurate because of data errors, but said it continues to work to improve the quality of data. (Agency-by-agency results, p. 11.)

Market share increased in four of the five socioeconomic categories. The figures show 4.04% of dollars going to woman-owned firms, the first time that category has exceeded 4%, but still short of the 5% goal set by Congress. Small disadvantaged businesses received 7.9%, exceeding the 5% goal. (That figure includes 8(a) firms, which do not have a statutory goal.)

Service-disabled veteran-owned firms garnered 2.5%, double the figure from two years ago, but still short of the 3% goal.

HUBZone businesses won 2.77%, down slightly from 2.81% in 2009, and less than the 3% goal.

The Defense Department, which accounts for about two-thirds of federal contract spending, awarded 20.9% of its dollars to small firms, down from 21.1% the year before.

The Labor Department was the only agency to achieve the congressional goals in all categories.

SBA said prime contractors reported awarding 35.4% of their sub-contract dollars to small businesses.

SBA's scorecard, which grades agencies on their performance and plans to improve performance, rated the overall government effort a B. Thirteen agencies earned A's, two were graded D and none received an F.

House Chairman: Insourcing Rules Should Be Public

A House subcommittee chairman is calling for a moratorium on insourcing until agencies make public their procedures for deciding when to bring work in-house, while a coalition of business and taxpayer groups called on Congress to remove obstacles to outsourcing.

Rep. Mick Mulvaney, R-SC, said the Office of Federal Procurement Policy should require all agencies to publish their guidelines and ask for public comment on them. He heads the House Small Business Committee's Subcommittee on Contracting and the Workforce.

At a June 23 hearing, Mulvaney said, "When the government chooses to consider insourcing, the burden should fall on government agencies to prove that the full, long-term cost (including pay, benefits, and support) of hiring and training new federal employees is less than a temporary government contract. Recent reports reveal that it is not."

Houston attorney Byant S. Banes said agencies often refuse to let a contractor see the cost comparisons they use to justify insourcing that contractor's work. "The government says it's source-selection information and therefore secret," he told the subcommittee.

Because of a May ruling by the U.S. Court of Federal Claims, contractors have no standing to sue to contest insourcing decisions. Banes urged Congress to restore the right to sue.

Separately, the Business Coalition for Fair Contracting endorsed House-passed appropriations bills that would allow public-private job competitions in the departments of Homeland Security and Agriculture. The coalition represents 31 business and taxpayer groups, including the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and Associated General Contractors.

In a letter to House Appropriations Committee Chairman Hal Rogers, the coalition urged the committee to remove barriers to outsourcing in other appropriations bills.

The group also endorsed a "sense of Congress" amendment to the House-passed defense authorization bill that calls for a moratorium on insourcing of commercial activities. The coalition said outsourcing will cut costs and create private-sector jobs.

The Obama administration's insourcing initiative has run into some tough sledding. Although the Defense Department had projected that insourcing would reduce costs by up to 40%, Defense Secretary Robert Gates acknowledged last August that insourcing had not produced the anticipated savings. This year the Army secretary ordered that no jobs be insourced without his personal approval.

End of an Era

With the last space shuttle mission scheduled for launch July 8, about 3,200 NASA contractor personnel will lose their jobs by mid-August.

The shuttle Atlantis is scheduled to land for the final time on July 20, and the shuttle program ends "30 days after wheels stop," program manager John Shannon said at a briefing in Houston, according to MSNBC's Cosmic Log blog.

Shannon said about 1,000 contractors will be retained to help prepare the four orbiters for their final resting places in museums.

Many contractors and civil servants have already moved on. One reporter noted that the parking lots at the Johnson Space Center seemed emptier.

Shannon said other tech companies are hiring many shuttle veterans. He recalled seeing former shuttle employees get new jobs, and then "come back and grab six of their friends."

At its height in 1992, the shuttle program employed about 30,000 contractors.

VA Awards Huge IT Contract

Seven veteran-owned businesses and seven large companies will provide IT support to improve veterans' access to benefits and health information. The Veteran Affairs Department's Transformation Twenty-One Total Technology program, known as T4, has a ceiling of $12 billion.

"This five-year program will help VA transform into a 21st century organization and enable us to deliver the high-quality health care, benefits, and services veterans have earned," VA Secretary Eric Shinseki said in a statement. "In addition, it opens an opportunity for veterans in business to grow and claim a share of VA's business."

A fifteenth contract is being held up by a GAO protest.

The awardees are:

Booz Allen Hamilton, Red Bank, NJ.

CACI-ISS Inc., Chantilly, VA.

Harris Corp., Melbourne, FL.

VA Aims for Better Communication

Three service-disabled veteran-owned businesses have won spots on VA's $480 million Veterans Relationship Management IT Solutions and Support Services contract.

VetsAmerica Business Consulting Inc. of McLean, VA, Insignia Technology Services of Newport News, VA, and Veterans Enterprise Technology Solutions Inc. in Clarksville, VA, will compete for orders with two large companies, Hewlett-Packard Enterprise Services and SRA International.

VA said the contractors will improve the agency's relationships with veterans through all media, and will be tasked with voice access modernization, customer relationship management, unified desktop, Web/self-service, knowledge management and member and integration services.

GSA Seeks Lower Prices on STARS

first 8(a) set-aside GWAC and proved to be popular with buyers.

GSA said the email gave contractors an opportunity to discuss their bids and to submit a final proposal with revised pricing. "Our intention was to ask all offerors to extend their offer deadlines in an effort to get more competitive pricing," said Mary Davie, assistant commissioner of the Office of Integrated Technology Solutions, in a statement.

But one executive of a company bidding on the STARS II contract said the last-minute request for new pricing poses a headache, because the contract covers myriad job categories, and each of them must be repriced for each region.

The emphasis on pricing comes as all agencies are bracing for a prolonged period of tighter budgets. The Defense Department recently created a new position of director of defense pricing as part of its effort to hold down costs.

An earlier email from GSA apparently led some contractors to believe that awards had already been made. GSA rescinded that message, saying it was ambiguous and no contracts had been awarded.

GSA Breaks Up IT Contract

GSA plans to split up a wide-ranging IT contract, reserving what it calls a “futuristic” task order for a small business.

The new task orders will be follow-ons to the GSA IT Infrastructure Technology Global Operations (GITGO) order, which was estimated to be worth $200 million over five years. It was awarded in 2007 to Catapult Technology Ltd., which was then an 8(a) and service-disabled veteran-owned small business in Bethesda, MD.

GITGO will be replaced by two task orders. GSA Technical Operations will be competed under the Alliant Small Business governmentwide acquisition contract; and Independent Program Oversight and Assistance will be competed under a contract vehicle that has not yet been chosen.

Systems Command, Atlantic also plans a solicitation for transport and computing infrastructure mission support and services. This is a small business set-aside. The NAICS code is 541330. Five Alaska Native Corporations and one tribally owned business are among the Top 100 federal contractors compiled by Washington Technology magazine.

The Alaska firms are Arctic Slope Regional Corp., ranked 57th; Nana Regional Corp., 59th; Chenega Corp., 65th; Alutiig, 67th; and Eyak Technology, 75th. The tribally owned company is Chickasaw Nation Industries, ranked 98th.

Alaska Native firms and tribally owned businesses are eligible for sole-source 8(a) contracts in unlimited amounts and are permitted to own an unlimited number of 8(a) subsidiaries. Responding to accusations that some of the firms have served as pass-throughs for major corporations, several members of Congress are sponsoring legislation that would strip them of their special preferences.

The Defense Department has begun an IT employee exchange program with businesses and nonprofits. Congress authorized the pilot program to enable the department to share knowledge, skills and experience with the private sector.

Each DOD component operates its own exchange program. The details last from three months to one year.

The Justice Department is reportedly investigating possible contracting fraud at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia. The Army's inspector general and others have found widespread mishandling of remains at the iconic cemetery, with people buried in the wrong graves and urns containing cremated remains left scattered along a creek bed.

The Washington Post reports a federal grand jury has been hearing evidence about failed contracts to digitize the cemetery's burial records. Army officials estimated the contractors burned through $8 million without delivering a workable product.

The Army IG found that cemetery officials had "no acquisition strategy, no integrated IT system and a series of IT regulatory violations."

Federal prosecutors asked a court to order a Mississippi business owner to forfeit $475,000 after he pleaded guilty to using illegal-immigrant workers on federal contracts.

The U.S. attorney's office in Jackson, MS, said Randy Weitzel of Gulfport, MS, and two others hired and housed illegal immigrants who worked at Keesler Air Force Base and the federal courthouse in Gulfport. Weitzel pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud the government.

The three defendants are scheduled to be sentenced Sept. 1.
