Obama Admin. Plans Outreach to Small Business

The Obama administration has announced new efforts to increase contract opportunities for small and minority-owned businesses, including projects funded by the Recovery Act.

The initiative came just days before SBA reported that small firms lost ground in federal contracting during fiscal 2008. The government fell short of its contracting goals for small, woman-owned, service-disabled veteran-owned and HUBZone businesses. (See story, p. 2.)

“Small and minority-owned businesses must play a significant role in our efforts to restore economic growth,” President Obama said in a written statement. “Small businesses employ half of the nation’s private sector workforce, create a large share of the nation’s new jobs and introduce many groundbreaking ideas into the marketplace. It is essential that we provide our nation’s small businesses with maximum practicable opportunity to participate in federal government contracting.”

The effort is two-pronged: outreach to small businesses coupled with moves by SBA and the Commerce Department to share best practices for small business contracting throughout the govern-

Commerce Secretary Gary Locke and SBA Administrator Karen Mills said federal procurement officials will participate in or host 200 events for small firms during the next three months aimed at sharing information on contract opportunities, including those available under the Recovery Act.

In a news release, SBA said the administration “reaffirmed its commitment to ensuring that minority-owned and small businesses, including women- and veteran-owned businesses, have

Recovery Act Contractors Must Report Spending

Contractors who receive money from the Recovery Act must register in order to file reports that are required by the law.

Beginning Oct. 1 any entity that receives $25,000 or more in Recovery Act funds must file quarterly reports at FederalReporting.gov, the website established by the Recovery Accountability and Transparency Board to track spending. Contractors must report how much money they have received and spent, the scope and timetable of each project, and the number of jobs created. The information will be available to the public at Recovery.gov, the Recovery Board’s main website. The first reports are due by Oct. 10.

With at least 150,000 contract, grant and loan recipients expected to file, the board is urging everyone to register and file early.

“The registration process itself is no more difficult than buying a product online,” the board said in a statement, estimating that it will take about five minutes. There are penalties for filing false information. To register, contractors will need their CCR number and DUNS number.

Because the information will be publicly available, it can cause unexpected problems. That was illustrated in July when the online Drudge Report pulled data from Recovery.gov suggesting that the Agriculture Department had paid $1.2 million for two pounds of ham.

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack hastily put out a statement explaining that the department’s $1.2 million purchase of “2 pound frozen ham sliced” referred to the size of the package, not the price per pound.

“I am increasingly aware that when we unleash this transparency in October, and the American people get to see how their money is being spent, not everybody is

Missed Again: Agencies Fall Short of Small Business Goals

The small business share of the federal market shrank in 2008 for the fourth straight year, according to SBA's annual scorecard.

Small firms received 21.5% of prime contract dollars in fiscal 2008, down from 22% the year before, falling short of the 23% goal for the third year in a row. The government achieved its goal in only one socioeconomic category: small disadvantaged businesses received 6.76% of the dollars, compared to a goal of 5%.

SBA officials have acknowledged that the official figures overstate the amount of small business contracting because of data-entry errors and some large contractors being misclassified as small.

The figures were released days after the Obama administration announced an initiative to increase outreach to small companies. (See story, p. 1.)

Service-disabled veteran-owned firms received 1.49% of the dollars, up from 1.01% the year before. Just four agencies met the 3% goal for SDV contracting: GSA, Veterans Affairs, Labor and EPA.

Awards to woman-owned business were flat at 3.4%, well below the 5% goal set by Congress. HUBZone companies won 2.34%, up from 2.2%, but still short of the 3% goal. No figures were provided for 8(a) companies because there is no congressionally mandated goal in that category.

GSA was the only one of 24 agencies to reach its goals in all socioeconomic categories. The Agency for International Development and the Office of Personnel Management missed all of their goals. Goals are set for individual agencies based on their spending histories. (See agency breakdown, page 3.)

The Defense Department, by far the biggest spender, awarded just under 20% of its dollars to small firms, losing ground for the third straight year.

Overall, small businesses received more than $93 billion in prime contracts, a 12% increase from the previous year. But total federal procurement grew by 18% during the year, according to official records.

"This record $93.3 billion in contracts to small businesses is significant, however, across the federal government we are committed to ensuring that the 23 percent goal is met and even exceeded going forward," SBA Administrator Karen Mills said. "Especially during these tough economic times, federal contracts for small businesses can be just the opportunity they need to continue to grow and create jobs. At the same time, the federal government gets access to some of the most innovative and best products and services."

R&D Funds Available For Clean Energy Projects

The Energy Department will release $37 million in small business research and development funds for clean energy projects.

The department said up to 60 small firms will share $8.5 million in new Phase I grants under the Small Business Innovation Research and Small Business Technology Transfer programs. Companies with fewer than 500 employees are eligible. The money is provided by the Recovery Act.

The six-month grants of up to $150,000 each will fund feasibility studies in the following areas: advanced building air conditioning and refrigeration, thermal load shifting, and cool roofs; water usage in electric power production and industrial processes; power plant cooling; advanced gas turbines and materials; sensors, controls, and wireless networks; advanced water power technology development; smart controllers for smart grid applications; advanced solar technologies; advanced industrial technologies development; and advanced manufacturing processes.

Successful projects will be eligible for follow-on funding.

"Small businesses are engines of job creation and innovation, and we need their ingenuity and entrepreneurial spirit to drive a clean energy economy," said Energy Secretary Steven Chu. "By helping small businesses bring clean technologies to market, we can create jobs, reduce our dependence on foreign oil, and reduce carbon pollution."

The deadline for Phase I grant applications is Sept. 4. More information is at www.science.doe.gov/sbir/.

Indictment: Fake Contractors Bilked Factors

Three men have been indicted in an alleged scheme to defraud factoring companies by borrowing money against nonexistent federal contracts.

A federal grand jury in Greenbelt, MD, charged an Army warrant officer and two civilians with collecting $4 million over more than a year and a half after they convinced the two companies to finance a classified contract for military communications. The three men allegedly created fake contracts, a fake company and fake documentation.

Warrant Officer Dejuan A. Fountain of Douglasville, GA, Rafael Simmons of Laurel, MD, and Rodney Mathis of Stafford, VA, were indicted Aug. 24 on multiple counts of wire fraud. They were arrested in July and freed on bond, according to the U.S. Attorney's office in Maryland.

The indictment seeks forfeiture of more than $4 million and two vehicles.

"This indictment alleges that an Army warrant officer conspired with two other men to defraud finance companies by falsely representing that services had been provided to the government," U.S. Attorney Rod Rosenstein said in a statement. "We seek to hold the perpetrators accountable and forfeit the stolen money so that it can be returned to the victims."

The case was investigated by the FBI, IRS, Defense Criminal Investigative Service and Transportation Department inspector general.

Contractor Settles Kickback Case

Dynamics Research Corp., a defense contractor based in Andover, MA, has agreed to pay the federal government $15 million plus interest to settle allegations that two of its former executives engaged in a fraudulent kickback scheme in connection with Air Force contracts.

The Justice Department said the two executives steered contracts for computer equipment and services to companies owned by themselves and their associates. The executives pleaded guilty to conspiracy charges in 2001 and were sentenced to prison.

Outreach to Small Firms Planned

greater access to federal government contracting opportunities." But the announcement was low-key, with no White House event or kickoff ceremony featuring cabinet officers.

Administration officials have said that the 23% small business contracting goal applies to Recovery Act contracts, but agencies are falling short so far. According to SBA, small firms received 21.4% of Recovery Act contract dollars through Aug. 21, covering the first six months since the economic stimulus program was signed into law.

During the same period 8(a) companies received 7.9% of Recovery Act contract funds, woman-owned firms 3.8%, service-disabled veteran-owned businesses 5.4% and HUBZone companies 5.7%.

"Government contracts can play a key role in helping small businesses turn the corner in terms of expansion and job creation," SBA's Mills said. "But make no mistake, the benefits the government receives are equally as impressive. Working with small businesses allows the federal government to work with some of the most innovative companies in America — with direct line to [the] CEO."

going to be happy," Recovery Board Chairman Earl Devaney told Government Executive magazine. "It struck me that everybody understands the positive aspects of transparency but not that many people want to admit there could be a downside of transparency. The question is: When the American people see it, how are they going to react? I don't know, and I can't predict that. I would just say it's going to be an interesting fall."

An industry advisory panel is urging the Commerce Department to provide government-backed loans to small manufacturers who are unable to raise private financing.

"If something is not done immediately, many companies may not be in business tomorrow," said Kellie Johnson, president of California-based Ace Clearwater Enterprises and the vice chairman of the panel, according to Bloomberg News.

The Manufacturing Council, which advises the Commerce Department, made its proposal in a letter to Commerce Secretary Gary Locke. The group urged that the government guarantee individual loans up to $10 million under the Term Asset-Backed Securities Loan Facility.

GSA has authorized mentor-protégé arrangements for all categories of small businesses, beginning Sept. 14.

A final rule implementing the mentor-protégé program was published in the Aug. 14 Federal Register. Mentors cannot receive cash incentives but will be eligible for reimbursement of indirect costs. In addition, contracting officers may give mentors evaluation credit when they use a protégé as a subcontractor.

Mentor-protégé arrangements will be permitted on all GSA contracts, including multiple award schedules.

* * *

The Federal Acquisition Regulation councils have proposed a new rule governing contract closeout. Among other things, it permits contracting officers to withhold 15% of a fixed fee or award fee, up to $100,000, until final indirect cost rates are settled.

The proposed rule is FAR case 2008-020 in the Aug. 20 Federal Register.
